WW2 Japanese Army Officer's Green Canvas Sword Belt and Leather Sword Hanger. Sn 12032 - 12032
A WW2 Japanese Army Officer's green canvas sword belt and leather sword hanger. The sword belt is in very good condition. It has a large steel buckle secured on a leather tab which is stitched to the belt, it has a leather keeper, the stitching is all present and secure. Next to this is a further leather keeper. A third of the way along the belt is a leather tab which has a wire loop hanger for clipping the sword hanger to. This is in very good undamaged condition. The stitching is secure. At the other end of the belt there is a leather strap belt end which has eight sets of double buckle holes. The end is in very good condition. The canvas belt ends are capped with leather, at the strap end there is about half of the capping missing. On the reverse it is plain canvas. There are no markings on the belt. The canvas belt measures 34" long and 3" wide. Complete with the belt is a plaited brown leather sword hanger, these are quite rare to find as they quite often rotted in the tropical climate. The hanger is in perfect condition and has a brass clip with hook and a separate hook on a chain at one end and a metal clip at the other end. The stitching is present and secure. It measures 14 1/2" long from end to end. (see 'Military Swords Of Japan 1868-1945' book by Richard Fuller and Ron Gregory, pages 90 & 92). The price includes UK delivery. Sn 12032
